If your minSdkVersion is below 26, this will be the icon rendition that will be used as your app icon by default. If you would like to use something else, click the Background Layer tab: Asset Studio, Showing Background Layer Your two main options are: a flat color or an image of your choosing (akin to the foreground, where you click the folder button inside the Path field to pick the background image) The background needs to be designed to be cropped into a variety of shapes, such as those shown in the preview (circle, various rounded forms of squares, etc.). That shows up in the preview as a dark gray circle. Typically, unless you changed the icon or layer names, most of the files will be replacements for files that exist already. On Android 8.0+ devices, the foreground layer, background layer, and device-chosen shape (e.g., squircle) combine to create your app icon. If you did not change the names of the icon, then your manifest should already have the appropriate attribute values. Step 3- Here add you app icon. Step 4- After placing the image in the mipmap folder. If you elected to have Android Studio create a round icon for you, ensure that your element has an android:roundIcon attribute that points to the round icon resource (e.g., @mipmap/ic_launcher_round). Copyright © 2022 CommonsWare All Rights Reserved Hence, outside of flat colors, typical backgrounds will be gradients or simple patterns, such as the default grid. In practice, the Asset Studio does not do much for you here, other than create multiple versions of your icon for different screen densities. If you right-click over pretty much any directory in the Android Studio tree, the context menu will have an Image Asset option. For most Android app developers, there are two other options: Get icons at the right resolutions for different densities from your graphic designer, perhaps exported from Adobe Photoshop Create vector as will be covered in an upcoming chapter Prev Table of Contents Next This book is licensed under the Creative Commons Attribution-ShareAlike 4.0 International license. By default, the Asset Studio has its Icon Type drop-down set for Launcher Icons (Adaptive and Legacy), which is how you set up an app icon nowadays: Asset Studio, As Initially Launched The overall name for your launcher icon is found in the Name field, above the tabs. In android studio there is a default icon set by android studio itself. Your icon can come from three main sources: Some image of your own design, which you would load into the Foreground Layer tab by selecting the Image radio button, then clicking the folder button inside the Path field, to browse your development machine and find that image A piece of canned clip art, which you would choose by clicking on the Clip Art radio button, clicking the Clip Art button to choose the image, and clicking the Color button to choose a color to apply to that image: Asset Studio, Showing Clip Art Options A letter or two, which you would choose by clicking on the Text radio button, filling in 1-2 letters in the Text field, choosing a font from your development machine in the adjacent drop-down, and clicking the Color button to choose a color to apply to the font: Asset Studio, Showing Text Options For all three of these, you can: Choose the name to use for this image, in the Layer Name field Choose, via the Trim radio buttons, whether to remove all transparent space from the edges of the image (Yes) or not (No) Resize the image from its default size That latter choice is particularly important, as you need to keep your foreground layer content within the safe zone Changing the Application Icon In Android Studio: Step 1- Open your application in Android Studio. On older devices, the app icon is whatever you choose it to be, where the Options tab helps decide what that is: Asset Studio, Showing Legacy Options The most important legacy option is the Legacy Icon (API manifests) open AndroidManifest.xml file.
